This document is totally full of holes that Bill Gates could drive a truck through. Microsoft has never been punished for delivering promises that it never met, destroying other company's products and wasting the planets resources by delivering software that requires constant repair (if indeed it is repairable).

Nothing about this judgement will change that. Microsoft employs very sharp and very cunning people with almost no ethics. There is nothing that even resembles a slap on the wrist.

I don't have the time to spend rewriting it for you, I'm wasting my time trying to fix outlook express so that it will read newsgroups properly because Qwest sold out to Microsoft and now I have to use their reader instead of the Netscape one that actually worked properly.

Read some of the books on Bill - especially "Hard drive" - and you'll know you want to rewrite this. In some ways he's worse than a terrorist - he looks legit. His aunt taught him to be like this.

You've got to punish this company and stop them from giving us crappy products and smothering the competition.
